Making BC Disability Research a Priority

Greetings!

Welcome to our new e-newsletter format. We hope that you find this new design easy to read and enjoy. Any feedback would be most welcome.

April brings Easter, World Autism Day, World Health Day and Earth Day. This month the DHRN is busy planning our annual fall conference which will bring us all together to share and learn once again. We are looking for your feedback on location and length of the conference as well as any topics you would like to see covered. Please take our short survey by clicking here. Your input is important to us.

Warm regards,
Sylvie Zebroff

Knowledge to Action: A Knowledge Translation Casebook

This series of knowledge translation (KT) cases spans the breadth of CIHR's health research themes and showcases just a few of the diverse and interesting KT initiatives embarked upon by health researchers. These initiatives range from engaging the media in an informed public policy debate, improving patient care and reducing wait times through better collaboration and cooperation, to helping some of the world's poorest children receive the nutrients they need to grow and thrive. This KT Casebook provides valuable insights into the real world of researchers and knowledge-users as they do knowledge translation.
